Guide for Families

Finding activities, your account, and your children’s profiles and consent

For parents and guardians

BrightTime is a countywide platform for out-of-school time. Families and young people find after-school, summer and weekend activities; the organisations that run them take registrations and record attendance; and the county's network organisers vet every organisation and listing.

CHAPTER 1

BrightTime for families

This guide is for parents and guardians. It covers finding activities, your account, and your children's profiles and consent. Young people with their own account have their own guide.

Finding activities

You don't need an account to search.

On the website, start from the home page or Search:

- Type what you're looking for, such as robotics, swim or homework help. Small spelling mistakes are forgiven.
- Narrow the results by age, kind of listing (programs, events, drop-in resources, jobs and internships), neighbourhood, highest price or free only.
- Sort by best match, starts soonest, nearest (once you've chosen a neighbourhood) or newest.
- Show the results as a list or a map of the county's neighbourhoods.

Every filter is in the page's address, so you can bookmark a search or send it to someone. The site also has collections (activities a network organiser has grouped, such as Summer camps), a page for each neighbourhood with what's on there this week, and a page for each organisation.

In the app, tap the search box, then the filters. The app adds a few more filters: drop in, no sign-up, food provided and transport provided. Near me uses your phone's location once to pick the closest neighbourhood. Your location isn't kept.

A listing's page tells you what it is, who it's for (ages and grades), when it meets (in local time), where, how much it costs, which languages are spoken, and access details such as wheelchair access, meals and transport. Under How to join it says what to do:

- Just come along, for drop-in activities;
- register on the organisation's own website;
- contact the organisation; or
- Registration through BrightTime opens soon, for programs that will take applications here. Until then, contact the organisation to save a place.

Some places show only the neighbourhood, not the street address, for example a program held in a shelter. The exact address is shared once you register.

Saving activities and reminders

- On the website, tap Save on any listing. Saved activities are kept in this browser only, so anyone else using it can see them. The Saved page groups them by deadline, and Add reminders to your calendar downloads a calendar file that reminds you a day before each deadline and an hour before each session. BrightTime doesn't keep your contact details for this.
- In the app, sign in to save. Saved activities follow your account to any phone or tablet, and the app keeps your last list for when you're offline. On a listing you can also ask to be reminded a day before the deadline or an hour before it starts.

Your feed, interests and area (app)

Once you're signed in, the app's home page is Picked for you. Each card says why it was shown, for example matches 2 of your interests or starts in 3 days.

- Your interests (under Account) are put first in your feed. They are the only preference of yours the feed uses, and you can change them whenever you like.
- Your area is the neighbourhood your feed searches from. Choose one, or tap Use my location to pick the closest. BrightTime never keeps your address or where you are.

Notifications (app)

The Inbox holds every notification BrightTime sends you. Under Account → Notifications you choose, for each kind (session reminders, deadline reminders, changes to saved activities, new messages), whether it reaches you in your inbox, on your phone or by email.

Quiet hours stop your phone showing notifications between two times you choose. They still go to your inbox.

Email notifications aren't sent yet: for now, choose the inbox or your phone.

Your account

Creating an account. In the app, tap Create an account, or use the website's sign-in page:

1. Say the month and year you were born. BrightTime never asks for the day. Adults' accounts don't keep it at all.
2. Give your email address. We send a link to choose a password.
3. Open the link, choose a password, and sign in.

Someone under 13 can't make an account. A parent or guardian adds them to their own account instead (see below).

Signing in. Use a passkey if your phone or computer has one, or your email address and password. Your county may also offer sign-in with another account, such as Google.

Passkeys let you sign in with your phone's fingerprint, face or screen lock instead of a password. Add one under Account → Passkeys in the app, or Sign-in and security on the website. You can remove any passkey there too.

Forgot your password? Use Forgot your password? on the sign-in page. We email a link to choose a new one. For your safety, the page says the same thing whether or not the address has an account.

Changing your password or your sign-in methods on the website asks you to confirm who you are again if you last did so more than a few minutes ago.

Sign out on all devices, under Account in the app, ends your sessions everywhere, for example after losing a phone.

Terms of use. You can read the terms at any time on the website's Terms page or in the app. Agreeing to them is needed before you sign up for programs yourself.

Children's profiles and consent (app)

Children under 13 don't have accounts of their own. You add them to yours, under Your family in the app.

Adding a child.

1. Tap Add a child.
2. Give their first name or nickname, the month and year they were born, and your relationship to them. BrightTime keeps nothing else: no last name, no birthday.
3. We email you a link. Open it to give your consent. Until then the profile shows as Waiting for your consent and can't be used.

The link opens in the app if it's installed, or on the website, where you sign in as yourself to confirm.

Each child's page shows their consents, one per thing they cover:

Consent	Lets your child…
Using BrightTime	use the platform at all
Signing up for programs	be signed up for programs
Messages from programs	receive messages from programs
Taking part in groups	take part in group spaces
Uploading photos of their work	add photos of what they make
Showing their work publicly	have their work shown publicly
Attendance photos	appear in attendance photos
Using their location	use location features
Sharing with their school district	have information shared with their school district
Use in research	be included in research

To give one, tap Read and give consent. You see the exact words you're agreeing to, and BrightTime records that you agreed to those words. Withdraw consent takes it back at any time.

Some consents disclose more about a child, and need a signed form instead of an email. The app says so. Ask the program or your network organiser for the form. Once they've checked it, the consent shows as given.

Stop managing this profile ends every consent you gave for that child.

Your child's account can do only what you've consented to. Their profile's state is one of: Ready to use, Waiting for your consent, Paused until you give consent, or Has their own sign-in.

Giving a child their own sign-in at 13

When a child on your account turns 13, they can have their own sign-in. On their page, choose Give them their own sign-in and enter their email address. We email them a link to choose a password; then they sign in themselves. You can still manage their consents.

Applying, paying and messages: coming soon

The parts of BrightTime that let you apply to programs through the site are built and being tested, and the screens for families come next. When they arrive you'll be able to:

- Keep one family profile: your household, its members, emergency contacts and any support needs, entered once and used for every application.

- Choose what each organisation sees. You share chosen family members and chosen details with one organisation at a time, for one program or all of them, and until a date you pick. You can withdraw a share whenever you like, and the organisation stops seeing those details at once.
- Apply to a program by answering its form, after seeing who it's for. If your child doesn't meet a rule that must be met, you're told before you apply.
- Sign waivers, such as a photo release. A parent or guardian signs for anyone under 18, and you sign the exact text the organisation published.
- Hear back: accepted, waitlisted or declined. If a place opens up, you're offered it and can take it or say no.
- Pay fees, choosing the price level your household fits. Nobody asks your income. Card payments happen on the payment service's own page, never on BrightTime.
- Check in with a code on your phone that staff scan, and see your child's attendance.
- Read messages from your child's programs and their announcements.

Your privacy

- BrightTime never keeps a child's home address or exact location.
- An organisation sees only what you share with it, only while the share lasts, and every time its staff open your details, it's recorded.
- No adult can be alone in a conversation with a young person on BrightTime. An admin of the organisation always reads along, and everyone in the conversation is told so.
- Reports that organisations give funders hide small numbers, so nobody can be picked out.
- Card details never pass through BrightTime.

CHAPTER 2

About BrightTime

BrightTime helps a county's families and young people find things to do outside school, and helps the organisations that run those activities manage them. Each guide below is written for one kind of person.

If you are…	Read
A parent or guardian	Families
13 or over, with your own account	Young people
Someone who runs activities for an organisation	Organisations
A network organiser for the county	Network organisers

One person can be more than one of these. A parent who also coaches a team uses both the families and the organisations guide, with the same account.

Where BrightTime runs

- The website, on the county's own address (for the seed region, `kettle.localhost` in development). Anyone can search it without an account, and it works with JavaScript turned off, on a slow connection or an old phone. Organisations and network organisers use its console: the pages under Your organisations, Review queue and the other links that appear once you sign in.
- The app, for Android and iOS. It searches the same listings and adds what a phone does well: a personal feed, reminders, notifications, a family's consent centre, and taking attendance without a signal.

Languages

Everything is offered in English, Spanish, Chinese (Simplified), Bengali, Haitian Creole and Arabic. Choose a language at the foot of any web page, or under Account in the app. Arabic reads right to left throughout.

The translations are machine drafts until native speakers have reviewed them. A listing that was translated by machine says so.

What is ready, and what is coming

BrightTime is being built in stages. This table says where each part stands today, so that nothing in these guides promises a screen that doesn't exist yet.

	Website	App	Notes
Searching and browsing activities	Yes	Yes
Saving activities	Yes (this browser only)	Yes (follows your account)
Accounts, passwords, passkeys	Yes	Yes
Children's profiles and consent	The consent email's link	Yes
Agreeing to the terms of use	Yes	Yes
A personal feed, interests, your area, reminders, notifications		Yes
Organisations: profile, sites, staff, listings, import	Yes
Organisations: forms, eligibility, waivers, applications, fees, attendance, messages, reports	Yes
Organisations: taking attendance on a phone, offline		Yes
Network organisers: review, taxonomy, wording, audit	Yes
Families applying to programs, signing waivers and paying	Coming	Coming	Built behind the scenes; the family screens are next

Messages from organisations, and a family's own attendance	Coming	Coming	As above
A young person's portfolio, badges and playlists	Coming	Coming	As above
Organisations: playlists	Coming		As above
Organisations: badges	Coming		As above

Where a listing says "Registration through BrightTime opens soon", contact the organisation named on it to save a place for now.

Words used in these guides

- Listing or activity: one thing to do: a program, an event, a drop-in resource, or a job or internship.
- Organisation: a group that runs activities. Families sometimes call them providers.
- Site: a place where an organisation runs activities.
- Network organiser: the county's own staff, who check every organisation and listing before it goes live.
- Consent: a parent's or guardian's agreement, given one thing at a time, for a child under 13 to use part of BrightTime.
- Share: what a family chooses to let one organisation see about its members, and for how long.
